Rare strength

Danielle has always admired the hemophilia community and its resilience. She hopes her work as a CoRe can do a small part to help support patients.

A little goes a long way

Ever since her days working as a hotline advocate, Danielle has seen how little acts of support and education can go so far in helping people pursue the life they deserve—no matter what they're up against.

The bond of baking

For Danielle and her mom, quality time is time spent baking together. They've even taken up entering state fair baking competitions together. Jury's still out on who deserves the blue ribbon more.

“After almost a decade of working in rare diseases, I have not met a group as resilient as the hemophilia community.”
